

VISUALIZING THE FUTURE

Your 5-Year Vision in 4 Simple Steps

TEST DRIVE
YOUR FUTURE

What kind of life do you want to live?

The sky is the limit, and there has never been a more perfect time to jumpstart your future.

How? Well, you can't make a plan if you don't know where you want to go. That is why we created this exercise to help you start thinking about what you want your life to look like in 5 years.

All you need is some time, a blank sheet of paper, and some curiosity. You never know, you just might surprise yourself.

“After years of listening to the adults in my life express their frustration, boredom, and anxiety about their jobs, I made the decision that I would spend my own adult life doing something that was genuinely worth my time and energy, something that I would walk away from as the end of the day feeling inspired and fulfilled by. Test Drive Your Future has increased my confidence in my ability to achieve this. I commend the Hoods for creating a straightforward and engaging tool to help my generation enter the ‘real world’ in a way that is satisfying and meaningful.”

-Shivani, High School Graduate

Getting Started

Set aside an hour where you won't be interrupted by texts and notifications.

Start the exercise on your own, or maybe with a friend. Then consider reviewing your results with someone you trust, like a family member or coach.

For a glimpse at what this exercise looks like in real life, check out this coaching session with Jim Hood and fellow Test Drive student, Max.

Ready? Alright, here goes...

Imagine that it is five years from today.

You've just run into an old friend in a coffee shop. You haven't seen each other for a long time, so you decide to sit down and catch up. They say, "Hey! I haven't seen you in forever! How are you doing?"

And you answer, "Things are AMAZING! As a matter of fact, I can't imagine life getting much better!"

They say, "That's awesome! Give me the deets. What's been happening that has been so good?"

Instructions:

1. Take out a blank sheet of paper, place it horizontally, and draw a line down the middle and another from side to side dividing your piece of paper into 4 boxes.
2. At the top of each box, you are going to write down one of these categories, each representing a different area of your life. Pick your top 4, the ones that feel most important to you:

- Education/Career/
Business
- Family/Friends
- Love Life
- Health/Wellness
- Finances/Money
- Home/Location
- Fun/Leisure
- Personal Growth

3. Once you have chosen your categories, make a list for each category of all of the things you would tell this old friend that has made these past five years so amazing! Make it as detailed as you can! See the examples at the end of this PDF for some ideas to get started.

4. Share your paper with a parent, mentor, sibling or friend. Open up a conversation to talk about your answers. What surprised them that they never knew about you? What were you surprised to learn about yourself?

There are no wrong answers. As a matter of fact, it really doesn't even matter if you have the answers yet. The goal is to get your wheels turning and really thinking about what your future could look like. By the end of this exercise, you will either have a good idea of where you want to be in five years, or you will know the areas that you need to work on to gain that clarity. And Test Drive Your Future can help you with both!

Examples

Finances/Money

I was able to get my training online and work at the same time to pay for my classes while living at home so I am ready to enter the workforce without any student loan debt.

I apprenticed with a local marketing agency who hired me as a graphic designer and I'm now making enough to live on my own and begin to put aside a little extra for the future.

Love Life

My high school girlfriend moved away for a few years but is back and we are starting to make plans for our future together.

We are even thinking about an adventure... maybe a road trip.

Personal Growth

I feel really proud of the planning and I took. I test drove a possible career in graphic design before I took some classes and now I'm in a place where I can make a living and not have tons of student loan debt like most of my friends. I feel confident in my abilities to learn new skills and excited for the future.

Fun/Leisure

I've always wanted to travel and now that I have a job I can do from anywhere, I am planning my first trip. I've been spending a lot of time reading travel blogs and chatting on forums to get some good ideas

Examples

Education/Career

I graduated with a four-year degree in biology with honors.

I completed a six-month internship with one of my top 5 dream companies and was offered a full-time position before I even finished school

Family/Friends

I met a great group of friends while in college who all love cycling and we have continued to stay in touch even though we are now scattered around the world! We meet once a year to do an annual bike ride together.

Home/Location

I currently live in a small apartment in Portland where I have always wanted to live. I don't need a car to get around the city and am close enough to bike to work everyday.

Health/Wellness

I've qualified for the Ironman triathlon and I'm in great shape.

I've got a local yoga studio I love to attend classes at
